Makes IR remote controls smart

Smart Wi-Fi universal remote control

One for all - this statement is used so often that it unfortunately seems exhausted and implausible. But with the smart Hama WLAN universal remote control, this sentence can really be used as a headline with a clear conscience.

This remote control not only controls all infrared-commanded devices such as televisions, stereo systems, fans, air conditioners, DVD players, set-top boxes, lamps and even old video recorders, but also makes them smart. This means that in future, all IR devices can be conveniently controlled via the app and, of course, by voice command using the familiar assistants. Alexa can switch on the TV and an app on the mobile phone can control the volume. Routines and schedules can be programmed so that, for example, the air conditioning switches on at a certain outside temperature or the TV switches off at 11 pm - the possibilities here are almost unlimited.
